

As an acorn from the parent tree,
A new and larger oak may be.
So by the same simile and rule,
From the old has come the new Howe School.

BILLERICA MEMORIAL HIGH SCHOOL

HOWE
HIGH SCHOOL

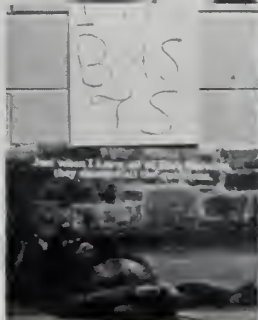

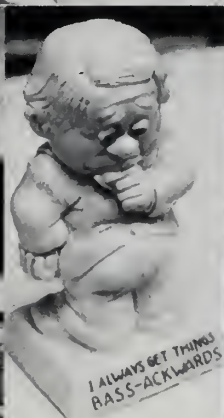

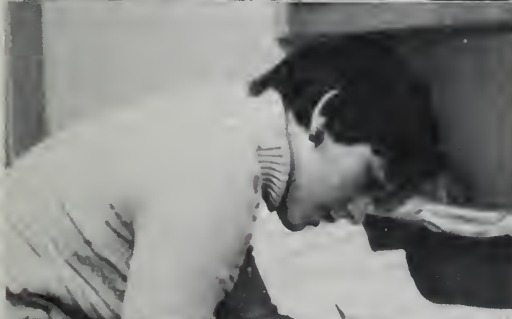

The individuals who have worked on the 1976 Yearbook hope that we have helped to preserve some memories of the past few years. We offer no apologies for our work; We feel that we have accomplished our task to the best of our ability.

Special thanks to Joyce, Laurie, Denise, Kevin, Jean, Joe, Bruce, Mel, Peter, Carol, Kathy, Jane, Mark, Terry, and everyone else whose typing, artwork, ads and patrons made this book possible.

We would like to call your attention to our advertisers; it is their contributions which enabled some of you to buy this book for $6.50 instead of $14.00.

A grateful salute is extended to Mr. Grillo and Mr. Richardson for all of their help, sainted patience, and unforgettable friendship.

Mr. William Flaherty, Supt.

To: Graduates of the Class of 1976

May I congratulate each and every one of you on your graduation from Billerica High School. You have seen changes in the school in your brief four years. You have encountered space problems and construction interruptions and still have performed in an excellent manner. I am sure your ability to endure and prosper during changing times will stand by you in the years ahead.

I wish you well.

Sincerely,

William H. Flaherty, Jr.
Superintendent of Schools

Mr. Howard Goodrow, Business Mgr.

Mr. David Nuttall, Asst. Supt.

William Archambault, Principal

Congratulations Class of 1976 on having completed your high school education and receiving your diploma.

This is a unique class because it not only graduated during our country's bicentennial celebration but it is also the first class to have graduated from our fine new ten and one-half million dollar high school addition.

You will always be remembered. The very best of everything to you in the future.

William Archambault

The faculty section of the 1976 yearbook was designed in a different manner this year. In the beginning are the newest teachers to the Billerica School System. The section ends with the teachers who have served Billerica the longest and most faithfully. It was our intention to honor those teachers who have devoted the most time and effort towards our education. We offer a special thanks to Chuck Lampson for his 36 years of service at Billerica High School.

Dear Reader; The year 1976 brings many memories and recollections of 1776, the year of America's birth as a country. All over town, special bicentennial issues of everything ranging from postage stamps to breakfast cereals are coming onto the market. The purpose of all the advertising is supposedly to make everyone aware of where the roots of our country lie—in the occurrences of 1776.

Yet, how many people have taken the time to reflect on that statement? In 1776, we did not suddenly spring up from the ground and take the form of 13 colonies seeking independence. We had to begin somewhere earlier!

For us, Billerica High School graduates, our heritage lies in the land that we walk on everyday; the land we take for granted. In this town, our roots are buried deep, strengthened by the past traditions left by the hardy men and women who weathered the hardships of New England life to leave us our own personal heritage of determination and spirit.

Yet, how many people regard this heritage as distant, viewed through a long tunnel of time? Do you realize that this long tunnel is only four lifetimes long? That seems to be an extremely short period of time. Little do we understand that our past is not far away after all. Everywhere we look or walk, we can see a reminder of our past heritage, such as the Unitarian Church in the center, or the Concord River. All these things unite us with the past, making us see that the traditions of our heritage are still alive, and that the patterns of our freedom are still being laid down today. Our heritage does not end with the conclusion of 1776—it still continues in our lives today.

The next few pages in this yearbook are devoted to our beginnings, the developments of our town, Billerica. Through these accounts perhaps you too can see that the true spirit of the Bicentennial reflects all of our not too distant past. The four lifetimes represented here are not like the tunnels of time through which we view history. Rather, they represent a corner we turn in a progressive society. We see a new sight around the corner, but the memory of what happened previously should be fresh in our minds.

Shaweshin was the name of a wilderness tract of land in the New World, with bountiful forest and trees, and a clean fresh river flowing along the west side inhabited by the Wamesit Indians; its name was probably derived from an Indian word, dropping the first syllable.

The first English interest in this area began about 1635. The colonial settlement of Cambridge, about 17 miles from Shaweshin, needed an outlying farming area to supply crops for sale in the settlement. On March 3, 1635, an order was decreed for the "gounr, deputy gounr and / or John Winthrope to vewe Shaweshin and surrounding areas and soe to informe Whether or noe it maybe a fitt place for a plantacon".

Following this directive, John Winthrope and Mr. Dudley, deputy governor, both granted 1,000 acres farms in the new district explored the area six miles from Concord. They found this land to be to their liking, especially with its good soil and available water supply. The friendliness of the Indians also did much to convince them it was an opportune place for settlement. The two men before sending back approval of the area chose the land areas they preferred. They picked two large sections near the Concord River, four miles from Concord. The two properties were adjacent, the boundary between them being two large rocks. The men named the rocks the "Two Brothers" to symbolize their relationship by the marriage of their children. They settled into the area guarded by the brother rocks, starting the flow of Cambridge residents to the outlying farm district. The original boundaries of this area had Concord neighboring on the south west, Cambridge and Woburn on the southeast. Andover and the Merrimack River on the north, and the Concord River on the west.

By 1654, twelve families had settled in Shaweshin. In six years the number of families had increased to forty. From the outset, these families formed a community bound together by a network of mutual sympathy and helpfulness. The first major move of this closely woven group was to establish a town meeting, open to all the adult males. At first, this meeting caused jealousy between residents because seating was arranged according to wealth and position. However, as time went on regulations on seating were not as strict. The first major act of this town meeting was to draw up a petition calling for a renaming of Shaweshin. Being almost entirely a community of British descent, they wanted a name that would better fit their heritage. It was decided to name the town "Billerikiyca", taken from an English town of the same name.

Another action of the town meeting was to screen all persons who wished to move to Billerica. Before one could be admitted as an inhabitant, he had to be reviewed by the town meeting, and judged whether he was suitable according to their standards of character. This method of selecting the additions to Billerica's residents, although discriminatory, contributed to an early success of the community because of its careful selection of hard and diligent workers.

One of the applicants to this town review board was a young man named Samuel ffroste and his brother James. Born in the province of Cambridge in 1637 and 1640 respectively, the brothers received an upbringing similar to their English traditions as experienced by their parents. For example, instead of kneeling on velvet covered pew in an Angerican Chapel, they prayed with their families in the rough wooden churches of the New World. On May 11, 1663, the town decided to accept them as inhabitants of the towne on the condition that they could buy or hire accomodations in the towne to live upon. With this approval, James ffroste moved right into the towne, marrying Rebecca Hamlet the next year. Her family, from Cambridge, also had settled in Billerica.

Samuel, however married Mary Cole in October of that year, 1663. His first three children were born in Cambridge. Finally, ten years after he had obtained permission to settle down in Billerica, he bought land from John Marshall of Billerica. This area covered the section south east of Andover Rd. He was also granted permission to cross John Sheldon's land freely in order to have access to Andover Road.

Before the time of his settling into Billerica, it is probable that he lost his wife Mary and remarried Elizabeth Miller, the daughter of Rev. John Miller. ffroste soon settled into life in Billerica, serving two occupations—working in the fields surrounding his farm and acting as a physician. Although he had no formal education in the field of medicine, his quick mind and gentle patience aided him in adopting doctors' methods he had witnessed in Cambridge to aid his neighbors.

A sturdy man, ffroste toiled hard at his farm trying to provide enough for his ten children. Like the other town fathers, he must have complied with the laws calling for him to perform his civic duty at such tasks as blazing trails, especially leading to Cambridge. In the tax records of 1688, it states that ffroste had two male adults on his farm, and a rateable estate which could be taxed 4 to 6 lbs.

For church taxes, to support Reverend Samuel Whiting, ffroste was under the inspection of Richard Hassel and later John Sheldon. "Being under the inspection" meant that these men would collect the money due to the church and deliver it. Although there is a record of ffroste being assigned to a collector, there was no mention of his name on the list of those who helped to support the minister.

Around this time, Billerica began to suffer Indian attacks. Although the Wamesits were friendly, the Pokanokets, led by Philip, and the Narrogonsetts were attacking white settlements to protest the increasing English power in the Red man's world. All around Billerica, towns such as Swanzney, Brookfield, Medfield and Groton were victims of these Indian attacks.

July 13, 1675, the residents of Billerica were given warnings that the unfriendly Indians were planning to move in on the town. Several houses were chosen as garrisons and the inhabitants began storing up quantities of supplies.

On August 8, ffroste and his family received the summons to report to the Pattin house, one of the appointed garrisons.

However, Indians did not attack at this time. Thus, everyone began to let their guards down, coming out of their shelters and wandering around. Despite the new found optimism, Billerica still suffered heavily at the hands of Philip and his warriors. The first Indian assault occured August 1692, killing two families. A second massacre befell Billerica August 5, 1695. Farmer and Moores Historical Collections (Vol.II p. 71) described this occasion. "In the northerly part of the town, on the east side of Concord River, lived a number of families, who though without garrisons in a time of war, seemed to be under no apprehensions of danger. Their remoteness from the scenes of Indian depredation might have contributed to their fancied security. The Indians came suddenly upon them in the day time. They entered the house of John Rogers, son of one of the early settlers, about noon, and while from the fatigues of the day he was enjoying repose upon his bed, they discharged one of their arrows, which entered his neck and pierced the jugular vein. Awakened with this sudden unexpected attack, he started up, seized the arrow, which he forcibly withdrew and expired with the instrument of death in his hands. Fifteen persons were killed or taken in this surprisal. Ten were killed of whom five were adults. The shock given to the inhabitants by this melancholy event was long had in painful remembrance."

The ffroste family, residing in a garrison, were spared in these attacks. The rest of ffroste's years were spent quietly, until his death January 7, 1717. In his will, he left his estate to his sister Elizabeth and brothers Thomas and Joseph, having a simple headstone bearing the inscription "Dr. Samuel ffroste departed this life."

During the period following Samuel ffroste's death, there was a brief respite from the Indian attacks of Philip and his warriors. It was during this period of temporary peace that Jonathan Hill was born near Nutting's Pond. Unlike ffroste, Hill was a fourth generation Billerican, his great grandfather Ralph Clarring having come to settle in Billerica from Plymouth in 1653. In 1723, the Indian attacks resumed again. However, the residents did not use garrisons for protections this time. Instead Billerica men were charged with the task of going on expeditions in the hopes of trapping the savages. The most known of these was the Lovewell expedition of April 15, 1725 in which 47 men, four of whom were Billerica residents, attacked the Indians by Lovewell's Pond in Wakefield, NH. Although Chaplain Frye, the leader and nearly a third of his company lost their lives, the Indians suffered a much greater loss. The tribe never rallied from this blow. The overwhelming defeat ended the threat of Indians in Billerica and surrounding towns for good.

In the early part of Hill's life, the domination of the Church over its congregation began to diminish. The pastor was a mild man named Mr. Ruggers. At this time, ministers in other towns, like Jonathan Edwards of Northhampton, Mass. were preaching controversial topics like "God is a tiger who will burn you in hell if you are evil." that the colonial people did not agree with. Their view of God was as a peaceful, forgiving being and ideas such as Edwards' did not fit into their beliefs. To show their disapproval of their minister's subject matter, they would often drive him from the church. In the case of Edwards, that is what happened. Ruggles, however, saw the results of controversy and took great pains to keep his sermons "middle of the road" style.

Ruggles' ministry was signaled by the appearance of a town bell. Through his influence, the town meeting voted on March 9, 1710 to use the money from a land sale to Captain Reed, covering an area west of the Concord River, to purchase the bell for the meeting house. The only stipulation was that it had to cost less than sixty pounds, the amount received from Captain Reed. Upon Ruggles' death in 1712, he was replaced by a Mr. Chandler.

Mr. Chandler is notoriously famous for his behavior, described as quite "ungodly". After the death of his first wife in June 1757, he turned to drinking. Even the marriage to his second wife in Jan. 1759 was not enough to console him. When Billerica residents began to complain about his shocking behavior, Chandler tried to win them over to his side by staying late after Sunday assembly to talk to the people and try to persuade them not to be harsh with him. The trouble, however, was too deep to be so easily remedied. In August 1759, articles of complaint were laid before the town meeting, with specifications of four cases in which the pastor's weaknesses were pointed out. The council found three of the charges sustained, and June 5, 1760 recommended that Chandler hand in his resignation and leave the Billerica Parish, disgraced. Two years later he died.

But his entire service was not all in this somber note. Chandler was the person considered responsible for convincing the town to purchase a larger bell to grace the meeting hall. Accordingly, on January 23, 1753, the town meeting decided to tax everyone for the pews they occupied in the meeting hall to produce enough money for the purchase. This second bell, it appears, came from England, and was probably the same which was "cracked" by violent ringing on July 4 1842. The memory of our older citizens reveals the fact that it bore an inscription including the name "Billericay", a form of the word which English workmen would be likely to use." In the area of social development, Billerica set a first by being one of the earliest towns to establish a library in Massachusetts. Known as the Social library, it was the property of the First Parish. The earliest date for this library is 1772.

In 1755, Jonathan Hill was first listed as one of Billerica's tax payers, although he must have started paying revenues earlier since he had gotten married to Mary Lane of Bedford nine years prior. Living in the west of Billerica, about six miles from his childhood home, he paid a rate in pounds for the minister's rate, or support. His land was termed to be found in the first range, or the area of Broad meadow between the Chelmsford Line and Rangeway Rd. At about this time, the large tract of land that had been Billerica was annexed so that five resulting towns were formed. Chelmsford, Bedford, Tewksbury, Wilmington, as well as Billerica.

The next important occurrence was the declaration of war between England and France. With her Indian allies, France made many attacks against British strongholds in the New World. Being a loyal town at first, Billerica sent fourteen soldiers to active fighting in this conflict. One of them was Hill, who served at Crown Point on Lake Champlain 1758-1759. One of his companions, Lt. Simon Godley, also of Billerica, was killed here July 20, 1758. Despite this loss, it is very probable that Hill, under the command of general Amherst, continued strong service, being present when Montreal, a French stronghold, surrendered to the English.

The outcome of the battles of the French-Indian war continued in a similar manner, until the eventual success of the English. This victory had a marked effect on every English settlement in the New World, including Billerica. First, it retained the influence of British customs in the towns. Secondly, the co-operation and effectiveness of American soldiers gave the English Parliament a false sense of absolute control over the colonies. In a few years, the colonists were to prove the untruth of this belief.

Billerica took its stance with the rebels during the pre-revolution era. On Dec. 21, 1768, a town meeting declared their disapproval of King George's Stamp Act. The meeting called for the boycotting of imported articles where possible. The next rebel act of Billerica occurred in Feb. 1773 at a town meeting, the fathers decided that even though they wished to be thought of as loyal subjects, their rights were sacred and were too vital to be sacrificed, especially since Parliament kept making one demand after another. If the claims of the two sides could not be harmonized, the town meeting felt, then there was no doubt that England would have to yield. From that statement grew Billerica's spirit of independence and union. A representative was sent to the Committee of Correspondence, in Boston, under the leadership of Samuel Adams to keep abreast of the sentiment of nearby towns.

The patriots of Boston, urged on by the Committee of Correspondence, defied the British outright on December 16, 1773 by throwing a cargo of tea into Boston Harbor with support of Billerica and nearby towns. England retaliated by passing the Boston Port Bill, which caused the blockade of the port of Boston. The Boston committee appealed to other towns to issue public statements criticizing the British for this action. On June 6, 1774, Billerica responded by drawing up a list of resolutions. "The Inhabitants (of Billerica) having taken into consideration the oppressive measures adopted and persecuted of late by the British ministry and Parliament against the colonies; and more especially having considered the very alarming and vindictive act passed for the blocking up of the harbor of Boston and putting a stop to the trade, unanimously came into the following resolves:

1. That for Parliament to tax American subjects is to deprive them of their rights as men and as British subject that they have a just claim to.
2. That the colonies are justified in opposing unrighteous acts of the Parliament.
3. That the act for blocking up Boston Harbor is hostile, arbitrary, and cruel.
4. That we consider the blow struck at Boston as aimed at the province in general, punishing us for showing ourselves as men and dragging us into slavery because we disdain patiently to take the yoke upon our necks at their leading.
5. That merchants should come to an agreement to import no British goods and carry on no foreign trade whereby the merchants in England should receive any profit.

Lastly, that as it would be an indelible disgrace and a violation of the sacred obligation we are under to God, to our country, to ourselves, and to posterity, for us tamely and pusillanimously to give up these invaluable liberties, which our worth ancestors purchased for us at such vast expense of blood and treasure. We are determined to use our utmost efforts to maintain them, and not part with them at a cheaper rate than they were first obtained." With these words, Billerica added fuel to the fire of independence.

The town began to recruit volunteers for a minuteman company in case it was needed. These men began to meet once weekly for training. One act of aggression in Boston that stirred up Billerica patriots was the tarring and feathering of a Billerica resident, Thomas Ditson Jr. on March 8, on the pretense that he was urging a soldier to desert.

Another Billerica contribution to liberty was to draw up a law forbidding any British team to load in or pass through the town with any supplies for hostile operations against the colonists.

On April 18, at 11:00 pm, Paul Revere and William Dawes began their famous ride to warn of the approaching British. The midnight riders spreading the alarm were likely to come by the Woburn, Lexington and Bedford roads and probably reached Billerica by 2:00 am. The company of 50 minutemen gathered their arms and hurried to Merriman's corner, where they joined in the assault and pursuit of the retreating foe. At a later scrimmage, the battle of Bunker Hill on June 17, Asa Pollard, a Billerica resident was the first soldier killed.

However, there was also a lot that could be done on the "home front" to aid the progress of the war. Hill, in his late fifties, at the outbreak of the Revolution, was unable to participate in any active fighting, but he spent much time and effort serving the town with so many men away in battle. One of his most notable actions was the development of a committee to provide for the families of soldiers who were fighting. He died April 7, 1796, living long enough to see an independent nation arising from the exhausting but profitable endeavors of a lifetime.

The country was at peace — and free at last. It was in this relaxed atmosphere of nonconformity that Marshall Preston was born June 5, 1792, the son of a successful Bedford doctor. He grew up in a prestigious, educated family, leading a comfortable life, far different from the lives of the rough and ready men who first conquered the wilds of Shawashin. Preston spent much of his childhood reading such books as Jonathan Swift's "Gulliver's Travels". His eager mind also absorbed the law books of his uncle.

While Preston was growing up in Bedford and later Maine, Billerica had also begun to grow into a "civilized eastern" town. One of the first business organizations that started the progress toward "civilization" was the Middlesex Canal Company, incorporated June 1793. Trying to connect the New Hampshire trade business with Boston and its port, the company broke ground for a canal in the spring of 1795 at the Billerica mills. This canal, 27 miles long, 30 feet wide and 3 feet deep, connected the Merrimack River with the Mystic and Charles Rivers, passing through such towns as Billerica and its neighbor, Wilmington.

The next proposal for progress raised many protests from Billerica residents. An ambitious transportation company, The Middlesex Turnpike Corporation, wanted to build a main turnpike through the center of town. The hostile attitude towards the proposal was started by residents who were afraid that the turnpike would commercialize their town, and destroy the quiet peacefulness of Billerica common. After many days of hard opposition between the opposing sides, the turnpike corporation gave in, rerouting their road to the west part of town, running across Nutting Pond.

Even with these two means of transportation readily available, the population of Billerica did not increase as fast as other Massachusetts towns had by the flow of either immigrants or people seeking a quiet peaceful life away from the clamor of the cities. In fact, the number of people in Billerica actually decreased in the years 1800-1830. So, when young Marshall Preston moved to Billerica in the early 1820's, he arrived in a town with a settled, countrified way of life, a town which was dependent on itself for many essentials of life. Preston had become captivated with the field of law through his uncle, and he had become a lawyer himself. He set up his early practice in Billerica, gathering a conscientious and earnest reputation.

Shortly after his arrival to town, Preston was elected to the positions of town clerk and selectman. In Preston's day, there were five selectman running the town government, elected annually by the voting males of the town. Through these two jobs, Preston became a member of the upper middle class of his time. He was no ordinary farmer working with his hands, but rather a thinker and a debator who could challenge almost any point successfully. In one of the social occasions of the time, he made the acquaintance of the daughter of one of the town's most established families — the Parkers. The Parkers were descendants of one of the founders of the Shawashin territory. After an appropriate amount of courting, Preston married their young daughter Maria and bought a home on the east side of the center, one door north of Andover Street.

After his marriage, Preston took control of the post office in Jan. 1826. Because of the many transportation systems open to the town, there was a large volume of mail to be handled in the small post office. In order to receive the mail, residents would ride directly to the post office located near the center of town. Because this trip was long for many people living in other parts of the large land area of Billerica, Preston aided the fight for a new post office in the northern sector. This post office was built in 1852, three years after Preston had finished his job in the postal system.

In 1852 construction on the first public school for the entire town was also completed. The earliest ancestor of this school, which became known as the Howe School was the system of squadron primary-grade school houses. Then Ebenezer Pemberton, a noted educator of his time, brought his experience as principal of Phillips' Academy in Andover to the school he established on Long St. At first, Pemberton School served as a training school for boys preparing for college or the ministry, but admission was later opened to girls also.

Another school, the Billerica Academy, standing south of the First (Unitarian) Church was established from 1820-1838. From 1838 to 1852, there was no school opened to the general population of Billerica beyond the primary grades. Dr. Zadok Howe, a leading physician in Billerica as well as in all of New England, became aware of this deficiency. He planned a building design for a school and selected a lot on Boston Road on which to build it.

Although he died before being able to fully carry out his intentions, his will established a board of trustees to use the bulk of his estate to carry on his dream. Preston was a member of this seven man board. During the first twenty years of the Howe School's operation, there was no charge for schooling; all expenses were covered by the provisions of Dr. Howe's will. However, when the allotted $20,000 was not sufficient enough to cover operating expenses, a tuition fee was charged, seemingly high compared to other schools. It now cost four dollars per term to attend the school with three terms per year.

Another prominent building was finished construction during this period of time. The new meeting house, financed by the sale of pews in the prospective new church, was at first the victim of bad luck. In the late stages of construction, the steeple caved in accidentally. The town reimbursed the builder $500 to reconstruct the fallen spire because they wanted a church that could be seen from afar like a landmark. The church was completed in 1797. The finished building, called the First Church, stood in the center of town, a little southeast of the present position of the Unitarian Church, facing the direction of North. In 1844, however, the structure was turned a quarter of the way around by jacking up the entire building, setting it down on a large cannon ball and pivoting it so that it now faced eastward toward the common of town.

The First Church had been the only meeting house in Billerica for its first 165 years. Two more were built in the early 1830's. The first was the Congregational Church on Andover Street, measuring sixty feet by forty feet, dedicated on January 13, 1830. The First Baptist Church was dedicated a year later, its first location being on the east side of the Concord River near the middle bridge. In the spring of 1844, the church was moved to its present location on Bedford St.

In 1849, Preston resigned his posts of authority in Billerica's town government. Still a part of the "Upper" middle class, he accepted the position of assistant clerk of the courts of Middlesex County, moving his family to Lexington.

Although Preston was now a part of the Lexington town government, the system he had developed in Billerica as town clerk continued after him. Town government began to have a bigger and stronger role in controlling the functions of the town. One of the actions of the town was to hold a "formal and fitly celebration" to honor the 200th anniversary of its founding. One part of this celebration in 1855 consisted of a historical rally, in which Rev. Joseph Richardson delivered a speech urging people to take a greater interest in the roots of this land around them. This stimulated the beginning of a hunt into the past, resulting in the publication of the book "History of Billerica" by Henry A. Hazen in 1882.

The town also assisted greatly with the cause of the North during the Rebellion of 1861. When President Lincoln called for 50,000 volunteers to defend the union against the southern rebels who assailed Fort Sumner, the doors of the town hall were thrown open. Church bells began tolling to call all male adults to meetings to discuss action and organization of all recruits from Billerica. In the first two years of this war alone, Billerica contributed over 110 soldiers to the fighting cause.

The news of victory was tinged with sorrow at the death of Lincoln. Rather than mourn Lincoln, the town honored him, and her returning veterans, in a town wide 4th of July picnic in the grove by the Concord River near the middle bridge in 1865.

To further honor the soldiers in the rebellion, a monument was erected on the common in 1873. The monument was a shaft of white granite, six feet square and twenty five feet high. The shaft was crowned with the figure of a soldier in a relaxed position with his musket at rest. On the pedestal was the inscription, "Billerica, to her heroes in grateful recognition of the Steadfastness of purpose, devotion to principle, loyalty to country, and trust in God, which enable men to die for liberty and union." On the east and west sides of the base are the names of the twenty soldiers from Billerica killed in the line of duty. The ceremony to dedicate the monument was held on October 8, 1873, in a mammoth tent south of the monument on the common. The ceremony was attended by many people, including Massachusetts and New England dignataries, as well as Billerica Residents, past and present. One of these visitors surely was Preston, 81 years old. He died in Lexington the next year.

Three years after the death of Preston, William Ring was born in Billerica. Unlike Preston, Ring was not from an illustrious home or a well educated background. Instead, Ring was a simple boy. Despite this, however, he had many advantages during his lifetime that Preston probably never dreamed of.

As in Preston's day, Billerica celebrated the anniversary of the United States of America with appropriate festivities. On July 4th 1876, the town staged a large gathering at the grove southeast of the middle bridge, the site of the veterans' picnic ten years earlier, with a ceremony consisting of historical orations and band music.

The first of the advantages that came to Ring simply because of the period of his birth was a large public library. Up to this time, the needs of Billerica had been served by a small library of 700 volumes in the back room of the First Church. Mrs. Joshua Bennett, a wealthy Billerica resident, saw this deficiency. She decided to make a gift to the town of Billerica — the gift of a library. Through the money donated by Mrs. Bennett, a building was erected just north of the First Church in 1880. The furnishings were purchased with the $2,000 contribution of Mrs. Bennett's two daughters. One of her son-in-laws, William Warren, supplied a wide fireplace with a mantel of a unique design for one of the two reading rooms that made up the library. Her other son-in-law, Joshua Holden, donated the rose window which decorated the front of the new library.

Another piece of construction at that time took place just across the center from the library. Since the mid 1880's, a granite watering trough had stood in the middle of Andover Street as a place where horses from areas outside the center could get water and rest before the completion of their journey. In 1881, a stick style canopy was built over the trough. Also in the center a bandstand of moorish influenced detailing was constructed in the southern part of the common. Benches were put in a few years later.

When Ring was eighteen years old, just shy of the age of manhood, a large fire completely destroyed the town hall. Immediately, construction began on a new one with everyone in the town pitching in to do their share. The new brick and limestone structure was completed in 1895.

Also in 1895, Billerica first assumed responsibility for supporting a high school when the funds from Dr. Howe's will became insufficient to finance the school. Classes were held in the Howe School built by the doctor until 1915, when the new Howe was built across the road.

"As an acorn from the parent tree
A new and larger oak may be,
So by the same simile and rule
From the old has come the new Howe School."
(Edward F. Dickinson 1930)

The influence of the Billerica Historical Society began to be felt. In 1896, the society placed an inscription on a tall oak tree on Boston Road. This oak had been growing in Billerica for hundreds of years and had been present when President George Washington passed through Billerica on his tour of Massachusetts in 1789. The inscription, inscribed on a plaque, contained this information about Washington.

The town meeting grew into an effective body, dealing with all parts of Billerica. During the early 1900's, one of its controversial votes dealt with the question of alcohol in the period of time just prior to the Prohibition. The question facing voters — should a license to sell alcohol beverages be granted in the town? The answer was an overwhelming 2 to 1 "no" decision, 423 votes to 172 for the license. Another function of the town meeting of that time was to insure that the town clerk was keeping accurate statistics about the growth of Billerica. In 1915, Billerica's population was 7,500 people with 104 births and 96 deaths that one year. Billerica also now possessed two voting precincts instead of one.

With its growth, new inventions and conveniences came to Billerica. It soon became a thriving town with the advancements of water, gas, radio and electric light in almost every home. Telephones were also common during this decade, with the early phone numbers being three digits like "765".

The first automobiles that were common in Billerica were Buicks, Chevrolets, and Fords, as recounted by Edward F. Dickinson's historical poem of Billerica, entitled "The Tales of the Ancient Oak." This poem, written in June 1930, recounted the events of Billerica's past through the "eyes" of the old oak tree George Washington had passed by.

Billerica even had five pieces of motored equipment in the fire station at this time. The five different types were a 1917 American LaFrance, a 1925 Dodge, a 1926 Maxim City, a 1923 Packard, and a 1926 Cadillac. In the following years, the station increased to eight vehicles. Two more stations were also built in other districts of Billerica. The tank trucks from these three districts served a double purpose of aiding at fires, and also carrying water to residents' homes for domestic use during the summer spells when their wells went dry.

Other memorials were also dedicated in the 1930's. The town meeting designated two street corners as squares to honor the memories of two Billerica men. The first, at the junction of Boston and Lexington Roads, was named after Isaac Hurd, a patriot citizen who had also served as a surgeon during the Revolutionary War. The second memorial, created in 1938, honored a contemporary man. The intersection of Lexington Road and Pond Lane was called the James Reddy Square. Reddy had been a world war veteran who gave his life to save two children from the icy cold waters of Nuttings Pond, Feb. 13, 1937.

High School life in Billerica was typical of most of the other surrounding school districts. In the 1930's, there were about fifty pupils in each graduating class. There was also a grade thirteen for students who found it hard to complete high school in four years. Dances and graduations were also held. At graduations, students began to receive awards, such as for the most athletic, or those which honored scholastic achievements. It was also during this decade, while the Howe Addition was being built, that the Howe High School Athletic Project was begun. This project included the construction of practice and game facilities, as well the male and female teams to use these areas. For the first time in the history of the High School, admission was charged to see an athletic game. The games included a football season of five games culminating in the Chelmsford-Howe trophy game. Two separate teams won several championships in the Lowell Suburban League during that period of time — boys' baseball and girls' basketball. The Class of 1938 set a precedent that, since then, has been followed by almost every other graduating class in Billerica — the publication of a year book.

The 30's were also a time of hurricanes, the biggest sufferers being the elementary schools. The cost of these damages were taken care of by the Town meeting, which set up funds to repair the schools. Money was also appropriated to build the first playground in Billerica. The site of this playground was to be in North Billerica, under the name of the "Charles Kolrush Jr. Field". Height regulations on town building, which were set up in 1936, decreed that general residences could be no higher than 2½ stories, schools could be 3 stories or less. Another issue the town meeting dealt with annually was the awarding of a sum of $300 to the widow of Edward A. Blake, who died as a result of injury sustained during fire service to the town. A final article considered by the town meeting in the year 1936 raised the amount granted to public library to $2,000. Billerica residents participated in politics on a national level also, rather than just locally. For example, in the presidential election of 1936, Billerica polls showed more votes cast for the Republican team of Landon and Knox than for the Democrats Roosevelt and Garner, who eventually won.

In the 1940's, besides issues of zoning, paving roads, and installing street lamps, the question of the license to sell alcoholic beverages came up before the town meeting again. This time the vote was closer, 1737 to 1302, with the earlier 1917 decision being reversed.

After the second World War, the town established a committee to name other squares in Billerica after war heroes. To further honor the dead soldiers of the two world wars, Billerica made plans for the installing of a large fieldstone boulder, mounted with a suitable bronze plaque, containing the names of all who had made the supreme sacrifice during the two wars. The boulder was placed in Billerica common at the south end near the bandstand. The large dedication ceremony was held Memorial Day 1948.

During the forties, the major change in the Howe high school was World War II. Many boys dropped out of school to fight in Europe or the Pacific. In the 1945, for example, 7 out of 65 students had joined the armed forces with only 58 receiving their diplomas that year. The end of the war was marked by the return of some of the veterans, both as students and teachers, and the end of gas rationing. Howe School now could operate buses to transport the sports teams. Charles Lampson, on his return to the junior high school after his military leave of absence, was appointed coach and director of athletics in 1946 by Cyril Locke, Principal of the High School.

The fifties brought a big change to the Howe. In 1955, the new Billerica Memorial High School opened near the site of the Howe High School to 700 students. The Howe now became a junior high school.

On a town level, the residents, now numbering 14,400 with 530 births and 162 deaths that year, participated in the town's tercentennial celebration with a week of festivities, May 22-29. On Saturday night, May 22nd, church bells rang at midnight. The next day there were church services praying for 300 years more as successful as the first 300 years. Monday was designated for treeplanting and a block dance, Tuesday was the Historical Society's day, and Wednesday was Children's day. The festivities concluded with fireworks on Saturday night, May 29.

Billerica joined other voters state wide in electing John F. Kennedy of Boston as one of Massachusetts' two U.S. Senators in the 1950's. Nationally telephone numbers changed from three digit figures to five numbers like "3-3503".

In 1958, Ring, after a "modern" life, complete with retirement, died. That same year, a new generation was born, the fifth lifetime since the founding of Billerica. This lifetime started with us, the class of 1976.

Time. To all men, this one word represents the irreversible change of one minute to the next, the succession of one decade after another, and the progression from one lifetime to the next. Each change in time also brings with it many other differences, such as variations in life styles and environments. But what strings each bit of time together with the other strands is the bond of the people.

Over 340 years ago, the first Englishmen explored Shaweshin, the early territory of Billerica. During the next 300 years, the area changed from an unsettled forest into an eastern town. This progression was caused by the interactions of all the people who lived in those years. A little was done by everyone towards changing and improving the town, even if it was only to build a new house or clear a new road.

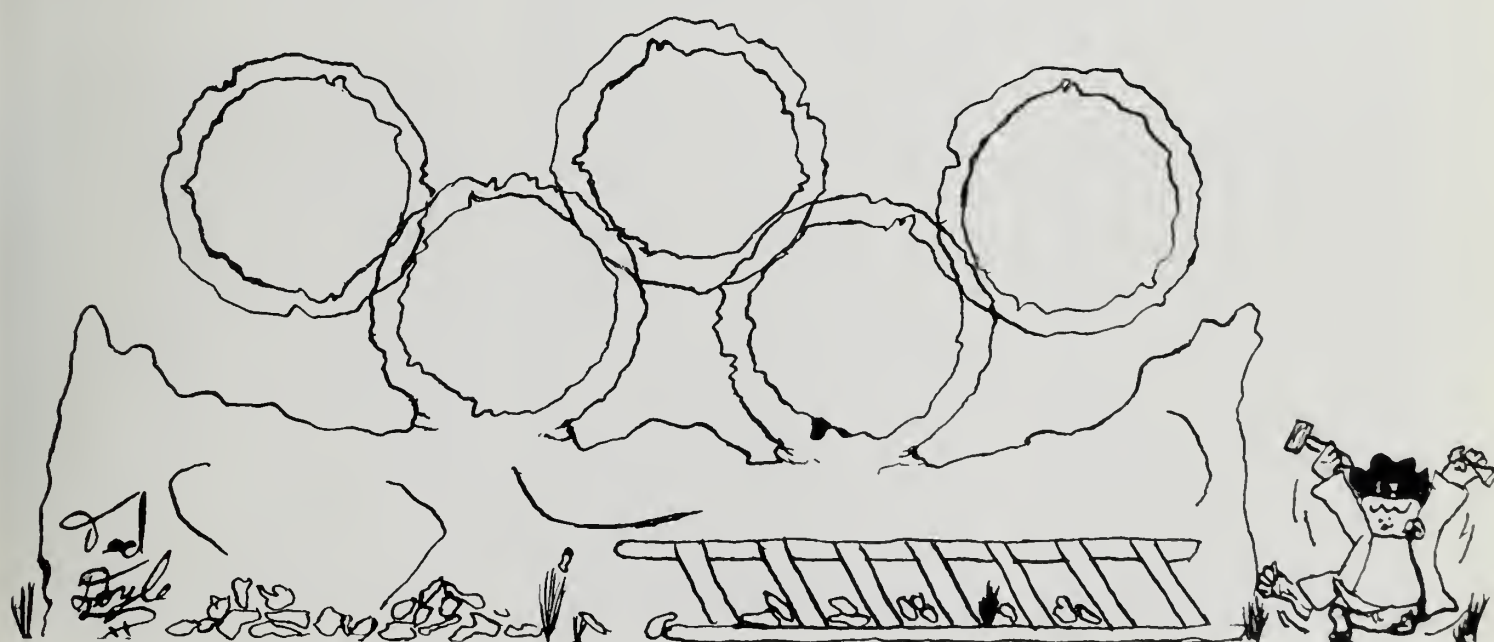

These people of the past have similarities with our current society. Like us, they communicated with one another, made plans for the future, and were occupied with achieving the best they could to live life to its fullest. They had no qualms about speaking their piece. They tried to improve their lives with each reasonable convenience that was invented.

These past peoples did not belong to a mystical period of time called "history". Instead, they are almost as current as we are. For example, the first settlers of Shaweshin did not live way back in the middle ages, but only four lifetimes ago! The men who fought to free the country from British rule lived only three lifetimes ago. And we, the class of 1976, make up the fifth lifetime of Billerica. All the advancements we make, the goals we achieve, will all affect Billerican life because they will make up one fifth of its history and culture. Whether one realizes it or not, it has been an extremely short time since our roots were first planted.

What we do with these roots, which keep us from blowing away with the wind like a fallen leaf, will leave a great mark on contemporary records because, each lifetime, whether or not it is "civilized" and "productive", is important. What is even more important is that each and every person matters in the whole of the world. Each person has a mountain of life before them that they must climb. At the top of the mountain, like the farthest star, is the human goal of self-awareness and sensitivity. We really can not let "invented gadgets" or mechanization keep us from knowing first hand what it is like to master the difficult climb to the top of this mountain. If we can achieve the goal of self-awareness and sensitivity in our own time, then we will leave behind more than just crumbling gravestones. We will leave the tradition of reaching the attainable star, as important to us as it was to our interactors from a different lifetime. The value systems may have since changed, but the final achievement of being the truest and most loyal person you can be is a universal truth, as relevant to ffroste, Hill, Preston, and Ring, as it is to us and our future.

JE

What can one say of a team which won nine out of ten meets this past season? Many things, mainly this successful season wasn't as easy to achieve as many non-runners might think. The team, led by senior captains Ted Doyle, a 4 year varsity member, and Steve Idarola, spent many long practices working themselves both physically and mentally to give as best a representation of their school, and themselves, as they could. The season began with a victory at the Tewksbury Invitational meet, defeating eight other schools. The next major win was the Catholic Memorial Invitational Division I Junior Varsity Championship. The Billerica Harriers defeated thirty-eight other teams in this meet; which was composed of over 250 runners. The only loss of the season was to the Tewksbury team. This meet, which cost the Harriers the Merrimack Valley Championship, was a close contest on Tewksbury soil, being lost by only three points. The junior varsity team also lost their match against Tewksbury. They, too, had a successful season, with seven wins and two losses. One of Billerica's team members, Jeff Cullinane, was selected to be a part of the Merrimack Valley All Star Team, consisting of the top ten runners in the league. Jeff, a sophomore, placed fourth for Billerica.

The girls field hockey team was captained by Kathy Hughes and Gerry Dube, both three year veterans. The final record was 3-4-7. Although the majority of the team was inexperienced at varsity competition, they played strong defensively throughout the season. Returning letter winners will be Luanne Sullivan, Linda Miklinevich, Sandy McNamara, Wendy Jean and Carol Higgins. Graduating will be Barbara Brown, Cheryl Cavaretta, Kathy DiMartino, Gerry Dube, Vicki Ecker, Joyce Elden, Karen Hanley, Susan Hoyt, Kathy Hughes, Therese Lahaie, Jane MacDonald, Kim O'Connor, Terri Porter, Debbie Rear-don, Linda Sargent, Jeremie Stearns and Laurie Whittenberger.

Although perhaps somewhat disappointed in the seasonal outcome team members deserve much credit for their continued spirit and enthusiasm throughout the season.

Determination! The 1975 Billerica High School football team can be summed up in that one word. The Indians were a small young team with a great sense of pride. Week after week the Indians worked hard in practice in hopes of accomplishing their first win.

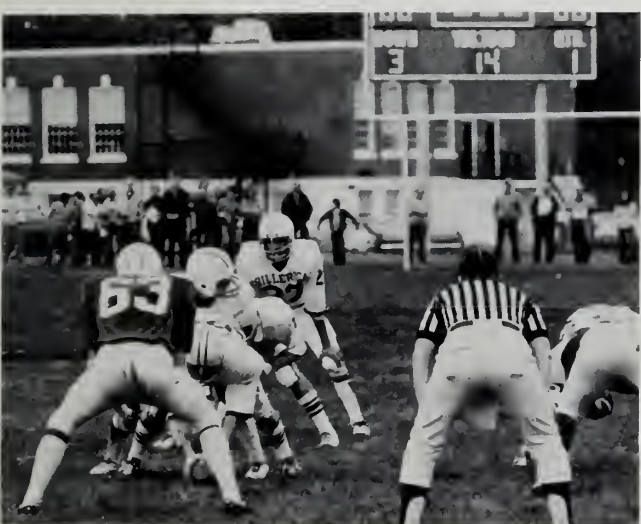

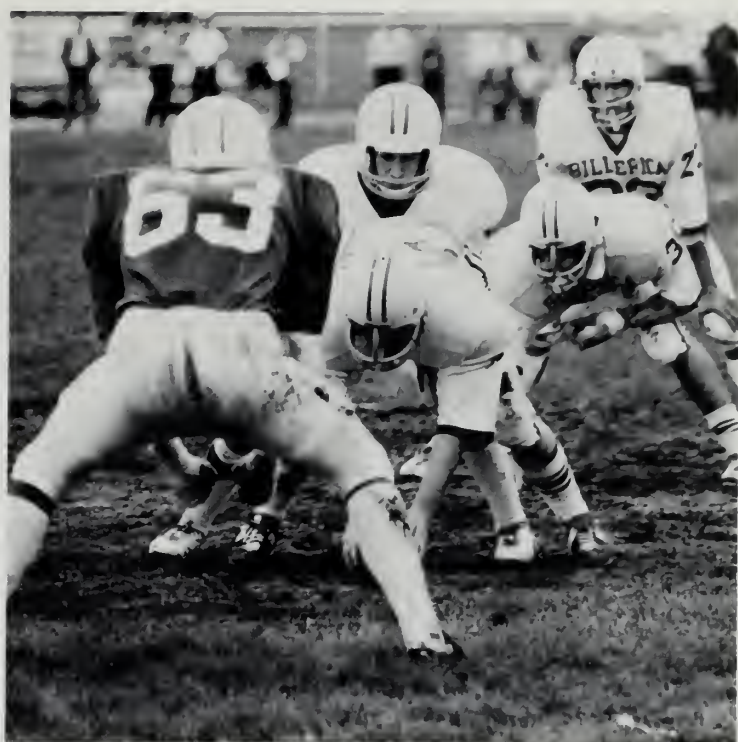

The first win was never achieved by the Indians. They still maintained their spirit and always stuck together, no matter what the situation.

The team would like to thank Coach Meyerhoefer and his assistants for their hard work and their non-defeatists attitudes. Things look bright for Billerica football teams of the future.

SOCCER

With Captain Carlton Quinton, assistant Captains George Robbins and Windsor Hall, and Jack Morgan as the only starters returning from last year's championship team, Coaches Altieri and Roach thought the 75 season would be a rebuilding year. But Billerica's pride and enthusiasm took hold. Newcomers Larry Griffin, Ken Johson, Bucky Rood, Aaron Rood and Robbie DiMatteo combined with Mike McKenna and Billy Brown to form the nucleus of the 75 team.

The Indians opened their season with 6 wins(including 4 shutouts) before being upset by Lawrence 4-3 in the last 7 seconds. The loss ended Billerica's undefeated streak at 21 league games. In a tough game at St. John's, Billerica showed what "Indian Pride" was by defeating the Preppies 3 to 2. The win kept Billerica's title hopes alive until the showdown with Wilmington. Bad breaks and unearned goals defeated the Indians as Wilmington went onto win the League Title. Billerica ended its 4th season with a 12-2-2 record by beating Lawrence 2-1.

As Billerica prepared for the E Mass tournament Billy Brown and Bucky Rood were sidelined with injuries. In the opening minutes of play against Saugus H.S. Windsor Hall left the game with a deep gash on the side of his head, unable to return to play. Before defense could regroup, Billerica was behind 1-0. Although Billerica outplayed and outshot their opponents, Saugus clached the game with a second, 4th period goal.

Several honors were bestowed upon our Soccer Stars. Carlton Quinton was chosen as the Northern Soccer League's MVP. Both Carl and George Robbins were chosen to all conference first team. Chosen for honorable mentions were Windsor Hall, Larry Griffin. Jack Morgan and Mike McKenna. Robbins set a new school single scoring record with 13 goals.

The team voted Quinton as the defensive star and MVP. Robbins was the offensive star. Hall was picked as the unsung hero as well as the most dedicated player. Griffin received Rookie of the Year and the most improved player.

The Girls Volleyball team completed their season with an 8-3 record, thus, winning the Merrimac Valley Conference Title, and also qualifying them for the District I and II Eastern Mass. Volleyball Tournaments held in Brocton. Billerica did not move up the ladder at District but made a good showing.

Although volleyball is a varsity sport, we also had a second team who have also mastered the skills and techniques required of the sport. Their record was 10-1.

Upon graduations, 5 starting members will depart from the team and leave a capable number to fill their shoes.

Basketball

Tri-captains Steve Dagle, John Scott and Sean Elmore are working hard to make this year a competitive one. Our strength is in our front line and the captains are three reasons these positions are so strong. Help is expected from Pat Renna, Rick Norton, Peter Coppinger, George Robbins, Don Rippetoe, Dean Royston, and Allen Ames. Everything being equal, the team should show marked improvement and play a good brand of team basketball.

The 1976 Girl's M.V.C. season promises to be an exciting one, with many strong teams, including Billerica, looking for the top spot. Led by Senior Co-Captains Kim O'Connor and Terri O'Connor, the Indian crew looks to be a good one with veterans Carol Hawkins, Kathy Hughes, and Luann Sullivan also returning to action. Rounding out the '76 squad are Karla Jordet, Mary Wood, Karin Quinton, Lisa Smith, and Nancy Conroy. Hopes run high that the BMHS team can equal or better last year's 17-3 record and go on to another State Tournament berth.

GYMNASTICS

The 1975-76 Boys' Gymnastic Team started the season with the enthusiasm needed for a winning season. The possibility of an 8 and 2 league record is clearly within our grasp.

The team, composed of mostly Freshmen, Sophomores, and Juniors is highly optimistic, and has its sights on the North Shore Gymnastic League Championship within the next two seasons.

The team is captained by Scott Button and David Drinkwater. We have also acquired an assistant coach, Mr. Robert Tucceri.

It is hoped with the addition of gymnastics to the school curriculum, this new sport will continue to gain in popularity for both the individual athlete as well as the total student body.

Gymnastics

The improvement made by the girls' gymnastic team over the past three years is remarkable. They have worked hard and have expended much energy toward becoming the best team they possibly can. The exciting thing is that they are very much improved in their third year, still being basically a young team.

In their first year of competition three years ago, they lost all of their meets. But they weren't discouraged. They came back the second year, beating some of the teams that had beaten them the year before. Their most exciting win that year was against Andover. Billerica won by only .3 of a point!

All in all, these girls are a hard working, caring group of kids who are always trying and giving their best. Though it is an individual sport, they work together in competition and in practice as a total team, each one giving her best individual effort for the improvement and success of her team.

Hockey

The 1975-1976 edition of Billerica High School Hockey began the season as the defending Division II Massachusetts State Hockey Champions. We were undefeated and still going strong. Our first game was against a first year team — Dracut. We won an easy victory and looked forward to a return match with our green rival Austin Prep — the team we had beaten 5-4 in last year's final of the Eastern Massachusetts Hockey Tournament. We were set, a little cocky, ready for anything, primed for a win, and we lost. After 39 victories in the Merrimack Valley Conference, the unthinkable arrived. Billerica had lost a league game. Austin played a fine game. Their goalie was even better. Very simply, we lost.

We sputtered for a few games. Fine combinations were rearranged. Bob Johansen, Gary Guarino, and Captain Carlton Quinton became a goal producing combination. Transfers Paul Miller and Mike O'Connor played well with winger Al Balboni on our yellow line. Sophomore Steve Arnold centered a line between Bill Hallenborg, and Brian Russell. John Arnold, Jack Hynes, Jeff Smith, and Tom Mulligan began to show as a defensive unit at the half-way point of the year. Doug Wain, Bob Kirchner, and Larry Harlow all saw action as excellent replacements for injured or non-performing players. Our goalies came on slowly. Randy Williams was the "old man" of the group but was given a run for his position by freshman Bob O'Connor. Both boys as underclassmen have a great deal to improve on. Sherman Ross had problems on concentration all year, but filled in adequately for the other goalies.

The second half of the season produced a greater concentration on sound defensive hockey. Another battle with Austin was at hand, and the State Tournament was just around the corner. The quest for another Merrimack Valley title was important for everyone on the team, even though it quite possibly could be shared with another team.

The next item would be to defend the State Division II title. No team in Division II has ever regained the title. Actually no team who had won the title has returned to the finals in the following year. That was our plan. Our purpose was to get back into the finals and win the title for the second time. This is a big order but like last year there is a light at the end of the road.

Basketball Cheerleaders

Carol MacGillivray, co-captain, Kathy Dwyer, Sandy McNamara, Caren Carbone, Kathy Silveria, and Judie Lecomte, co-captain.

Winter Track

The 1975-1976 winter track team is led by senior tri-captains Ted Doyle, Steve Iadarola, and Bill Sutherland. Other seniors according to their events are: Sprinters — Kevin Faria, Dave Lungo, John McBride, Bill Turner. Hurdlers — Steve Iadarola, Mark Morgida, Eric Steigmann. Shot Put — Tim Gearin, Bill Sutherland. Distance Runners — Ted Doye, Dale Lavigne. In addition, we have three senior girls on our team, Cheryl Cavaretta, Vicki Ecker, and Jeremie Stearns, the pioneers of girls' track at BMHS.

WRESTLING

Captains: Windsor Hall, Peter Miln, and Charlie Capps

This year's wrestling team is one of the best Billerica High School has had in the past five seasons. We are a young team with only six seniors on the entire squad. So things look even brighter for the future with many outstanding underclassmen returning next season. Billerica can be proud of this hard working enthusiastic group of young men.

The page written in script which introduces the Graduate Wills is an actual will, witnessed and dated July 20, 1647; being Probated on June 1, 1648, on file in Suffolk Probate Office, Boston. What is significant about Ezekial — will was the list of his worldly possessions.

It seems odd to us that possessions such as household articles, ax handles and a flitch of bacon were held in such high value as to be listed in a document of this kind. Have you ever stopped to think how, along with the changing decades, the value of basic possessions has changed also? Yet, could we, in our lives now, get along without these basics? Has their value really decreased, or does it just appear to be that way because we have become so "civilized", that we no longer stop to think how necessary they actually are?

To those of our readers who do see this significance — sometime, someday make a list of all your valued possessions and compare the two. It may prove to be interesting.

I got an A!

What you see is what you get!

GOTCHA!

You DON'T think these are REALLY my legs — Do You?

Alas, poor Yorick, I knew him well.

What do you mean it's 2nd period?

How the heck do you get out of here?

My girdle is KILLING me!

Only a little longer . . .

There's ketchup on my lollipop!

Exedrin headache #49,514

Remember getting caps and gowns?

I've gotta go to the can, man!

That friendly face . . .

Now REALLY Darling

What's crawling up my neck?!

We found this copy, written in 1883, interesting because even we who have lived in Billerica all our lives, have never really observed our surroundings with the detail and vitality of Hazen. Is it a sign of our times that we do not notice our surroundings with such perception? In becoming a modern Society have we overlooked the fundamental landmarks that distinguish our town, and our lives?

"The swelling ground on which the village stands, while not very high, is sufficiently elevated to give a wide view of the country in all directions. It may have interest to survey the scene in imagination from the tower of the First Church. The spire of the North Tewksbury church is very nearly north and may be our starting point. When the atmospheric conditions are very favorable, a rounded summit may be dimly seen, which is almost certainly Gunstock Mountain, south of Lake Winnepesaukee, and sixty-five miles distant. Mt. Washington is in the same direction, and if it were otherwise possible to see this monarch of the White Mountains, Gunstock would hide it. About 12 degrees east is Patuckawa, in Deerfield, New Hampshire, thirty-nine miles distant, and passing as much farther we come to Prospect Hill, once a Billerica landmark and watch tower in days of Indian warfare. Then the village of Tewksbury and State Alms-house, and a little farther east a summit is to be seen, when the conditions favor, which may be Agamenticus, fifty-four miles away. The village and seminary buildings at Andover are hidden by Fox Hill, but Holt's Hill, southeast of Andover, marks the locality. Then coming almost to the east point we reach the vast building of the Insane Asylum, at Danvers, and passing the east point as far come to the tower of the church in Wilmington, and a little farther, Reading appears. A glimpse of the Woburn spires follows, and then the church in Burlington, but the Burlington highlands hide from view Bunker Hill Monument and the State House. Next come Arlington Heights and Blue Hill in Milton, Lexington, and Bedford, which marks the south point. Concord then shows its spires, and after a wide interval, about ten degrees south of west, Wachusett lifts its rounded and conspicuous summit. The spires of Westford cut the horizon as much north of west, and just beyond, in the distance, the singular head of Watatic, in Ashby, appears. Then we come to Gilson's Hill in the foreground, and, beyond and just south of it, Robin's Hill, in Chelmsford, and Kidder's Mountain, in New Ipswich, New Hampshire, thirty-four miles distant. This brings us to the monarch of the whole circle, Monadnock, whose sharp and grand crest must not be mistaken for some lower height less than forty-seven miles away. Farther north are two conspicuous and fine summits, called, on the recent official map of New Hampshire, Pack Monadnock, but popularly known as Temple and Peterborough mountains. North of the latter, and through a depression in the hills which gives the railroad a passage way, a rounded summit may be occasionally seen with beautiful distinctness against the evening sky, which I suppose to be Bald Mountain, in Antrim. Lyndeborough Mt. is succeeded by Crochet Mt. in Franconia, with its longer crest; then Jo English Hill and, near by, the village of Mont Vernon. Just beyond, a very distant summit may sometimes be seen, which is possibly Sunapee Mt. sixty-eight miles distant, but probably some height not quite so far; and the circle is rounded by the Uncanoonucks, in Goffstown, with North Chelmsford and Lowell in the foreground.

The chief interest of such an itinerary, if it has any, will be to those who may have opportunity to follow it for themselves and fill in the outline with other details. But it will serve to suggest to any one the broad expanse of hills, and plains, and streams, over which the eye travels to the distant summits. These, clothed in their ever changing attire of sunshine and shadow, afford a panorama of peculiar beauty and grandeur. To watch the play of cloud and storm as they travel over such a range is instructive and delightful; while the sunshine with its shadows and above all its sunsets is surpassing. The praises of Andover sunsets have been sung more widely. But I have had opportunity to enjoy and study both, and I do not look to see, this side of the gates of pearl, any similar vision more indescribable in its beauty and glory than I have often witnessed in Billerica sunsets."

Passage from Henry A. Hazen's History of Billerica, published by A. Williams and Co., Boston, 1883.
